

Hello Northwestern Law Faculty,

The Northwestern Journal of Human Rights is thrilled to announce the publishing of its first issue in its symposium volume, Vol. 19, Issue 1.

These articles follow JHR's 2020 Symposium, Human Rights and Access to Justice in Ethiopia. The symposium was hosted in partnership with Northwestern's Center for International Human Rights and the Addis Ababa University School of Law.

Here are the articles for your reading:

- Prof. Thomas Geraghty: Introduction to Symposium, “Human Rights and Access to Justice in Ethiopia”
- Abdi Jibril Ali: Remedies for Human Rights Violations: A Reform Proposal for Addressing Victims of Criminal Proceedings in Ethiopia
- Adinet Adinew Tesfaye & Endalkachew Abera Mekuriya: Conditions of Human Rights in Ethiopia in the Aftermath of Political Reform
- Daniel E. Alemayehu: Multiple Legal Orders in Ethiopia: An Impediment on the Enforcement of Women Rights
- Sirak Akalu Iyassu & Fiona McKinnon: Disability Rights are Human Rights: Pushing Ethiopia Towards a Rights-based Movement
- Tewodros Meheret: Reform of Regulation of Legal Practice in Ethiopia: Does It Improve Access to Justice?

Thank you to the authors for their amazing effort during this very difficult time, Prof. Tom Geraghty, the Center for International Human Rights, Addis Ababa University School of Law, and the editing team and members of JHR.

We look forward to publishing the next issue in the symposium volume soon. Happy reading!

Best,
Zoë

Zoë Segil (Helstrom) (she, hers)
Juris Doctor Candidate | Class of 2021
Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law
858.437.3834 | zoe.helstrom@law.northwestern.edu